AN HISTORICAL AND MORAL VIEW OF THE ORIGIN AND PROGRESS
OF THE
FRENCH REVOLUTION; AND THE EFFECT IT HAS PRODUCED IN EUROPE.

BY MARY WOLLSTONECRAFT.

VOLUME THE FIRST.

THE SECOND EDITION.

LONDON:
PRINTED FOR J. JOHNSON, IN ST. PAUL'S CHURCH-YARD.

1795.
ADVERTISEMET.

THIS history, taking in such a variety of facts and opinions, has grown under my hand; especially as in writing I cannot avoid entering into some defultory disquisitions, and descriptions of manners and things which, though not strictly necessary to elucidate the events, are intimately connected with the main object; I have also been led into several theoretical investigations, whilst marking the political effects that naturally flow from the progress of knowledge. It is probable, therefore, that this work will be extended to two or three more volumes, a considerable part of which is already written.

PREFACE.
THE revolution in France exhibits a scene, in the political world, not less novel and interesting than the contrast is striking between the narrow opinions of superstition, and the enlightened sentiments of masculine and improved philosophy.

To mark the prominent features of this revolution, requires a mind, not only unsofisticated by old prejudices, and the inveterate habits of degeneracy; but an amelioration of temper, produced by the exercise of the most enlarged principles of humanity.

The rapid changes, the violent, the base, and nefarious assassinations, which have clouded the vivid prospect that began to spread spread a ray of joy and gladness over the gloomy horizon of oppression, cannot fail to chill the sympathizing bosom, and palsy intellectual vigour. To sketch these vicissitudes is a task so arduous and melancholy, that, with a heart trembling to the touches of nature, it becomes necessary to guard against the erroneous inferences of sensibility; and reason beaming on the grand theatre of political changes, can prove the only sure guide to direct us to a favourable or just conclusion.

This important conclusion, involving the happiness and exaltation of the human character, demands serious and mature consideration; as it must ultimately sink the dignity of society into contempt, and its members into greater wretchedness; or elevate it to a degree of grandeur not hitherto anticipated, but by the most enlightened statesmen and philosophers.

Contemplating then these stupendous events with the cool eye of observation, the judgement, difficult to be preserved unwarped under the pressure of the calamitous horrors produced by desperate and enraged factions, will continually perceive that it is the uncontaminated mass of the French nation, whose minds begin to grasp the sentiments of freedom, that has secured the equilibrium of the state; often tottering on the brink of annihilation; in spite of the folly, selfishness, madness, treachery, and more fatal mock patriotism, the common result of depraved manners, the concomitant of that servility and voluptuousness which for so long a space of time has embraced the higher orders of this celebrated nation.

By thus attending to circumstances, we shall be able to discern clearly that the revolution was neither produced by the abilities or intrigues of a few individuals; nor was the effect of sudden and short-lived enthusiasm; but the natural consequence of intellectual improvement, gradually proceeding to perfection in in the advancement of communities, from a state of barbarism to that of polished society, till now arrived at the point when sincerity of principles seems to be hastening the overthrow of the tremendous empire of superstition and hypocrisy, erected upon the ruins of gothic brutality and ignorance.
CONTENTS.

BOOK I.

CHAPTER I.

CHAPTER II.

CHAPTER III.

Administration of de Brienne. Dissolution of the notables. Land tax and stamp duty recommended by them, CONTENTS.

them, but refused to be sanctioned by the parliament. Bed of justice. The parliament banished to Troyes, but soon compromised for its recall. Struggles of the court party to prevent the convocation of the states-general. Banishment of the duke of Orleans, and two spirited members of the parliament. Cour pleniere. Remarks on the parliaments. Imprisonment of the members. Deputies of the Province of Brittany sent to the Bastille. The soldiery let loose upon the people. p. 48.

CHAP. IV.

BOOK II.

CHAP. I.

Retrospective view of grievances in France—the nobles—the military—the clergy—the farmers general. Election of deputies to the states-general. Arts of the courtiers. Assembly of the states. Riots excited at Paris. Opening of the states-general. The king's speech. Answer to it by the keeper of the seals.
CONTENTS

feals. Speech of Mr. Necker. Contest respecting the mode of assembling. Tacit establishment of the liberty of the press. Attempt of the court to restrain it. The deputies declare themselves a national assembly. p. 75.

CHAP. II.

The national assembly proceed to business. Opposition of the nobles, bishops, and court. A séance royale proclaimed, and the ball of the assembly surrounded by soldiers. The members adjourn to the tennis court, and vow never to separate till a constitution should be completed. The majority of the clergy and two of the nobles join the commons. Séance royale. The king's speech. Spirited behaviour of the assembly. Speech of Mirabeau. Persons of the deputies declared inviolable. Minority of the nobles join the commons. At the request of the king the minority of the clergy do the same,—and are at length followed by the majority of the nobles. Character of the queen of France,—of the king,—and of the nobles. Lectures on liberty at the palais royal. Paris surrounded by troops. Spirit of liberty infused into the soldiers. Eleven of the French guards imprisoned because they would not fire on the populace, and liberated by the people. Remonstrance of the national assembly. The king proposes to remove the assembly to Noyon, or Soissons. Necker dismissed. City militia proposed. The populace attacked in the garden of the Tuilleries by the prince of Lambesc. Nocturnal orgies at Versailles. p. 109.

CHAP.
CONTENTS.

CHAP. III.

Preparations of the Parisians for the defence of the city. The guards, and city watch join the citizens. The armed citizens appoint a commander in chief. Conduct of the national assembly during the disturbances at Paris. They publish a declaration of rights,—and offer their mediation with the citizens,—which is bootlessly refused by the king. Proceedings at Paris on the 14th of July. Taking of the bastille. The mayor shot. Proceedings of the national assembly at Versailles. Appearance of the king in the assembly. His speech. p. 165.

CHAP. IV.

BOOK III.

CHAP. I.

A deputation of the national assembly arrives at Paris. Baillie chosen mayor, and La Fayette commander in chief

CHAP. II.

The duke of Liancourt chosen president. The people arm for the defence of the country. The municipal officers appointed under the old government superseded by committees. Some people treacherously destroyed by springing a mine at a civic feast. The Genevese resident taken up by the patrole. The French suspicious of the designs of Britain. Necker returns. General amnesty resolved by the electors of Paris. Debate on a declaration of rights. Declaration of rights separate from the constitution determined on. Sacrifices made by the nobles, clergy, &c. pag. 263.

CHAP. III.

BOOK IV.

P. 313.

CHAP. II.

Observations on the veto. The women offer up their ornaments to the public. Debate whether the Spanish branch of the Bourbons could reign in France. Conduct of the king respecting the decrees of the fourth of August. Vanity of the French. Debates on quartering a thousand regulars at Versailles. Individuals offer their jewels and plate to make up the deficiency of the loan. The king sends his rich service of plate to the mint. Necker's proposal for every citizen to give up a fourth of his income. Speech of Mirabeau on it. His address to the nation.

P. 359.
CHAPTER III.

CHAPTER I.

Error of the national assembly in neglecting to secure the freedom of France. Its conduct compared with that of the American States. Necessity of forming a new constitution as soon as an old government is destroyed. The declaring the king inviolable a wrong measure. Security of the French against a counter-revolution. The flight of the king meditated. p. 399.

CHAPTER II.

Entertainment at Versailles. The national cockade trampled under foot. A mob of women proceed to the hotel-de-ville—and thence to Versailles. The king's reply to the national assembly's request, that he would sanction the declaration of rights and the first articles of the constitution. Debates on it. Arrival of the mob at Versailles. The king receives a deputation from the women, and sanctions the decree for the free circulation of grain. The assembly summoned. La Fayette arrives with the Parisian militia. The palace attacked by the mob—who are dispersed.
dispersed by the national guards. Reflections on the conduct of the duke of Orleans. p. 420.

CHAP. III.
The mob demand the king's removal to Paris. This city described. The king repairs to the capital, escorted by a deputation of the national assembly and the parian militia. The king's title changed. Proceedings of the national assembly. Reflections on the declaration of rights. p. 470.

CHAP. IV.
Progress of reform. The encyclopedia. Liberty of the press. Capitals. The French not properly qualified for the revolution. Savage compared with civilized man. Effects of extravagance—of commerce—and of manufactures. Excuse for the ferocicity of the parians. p. 492.